By Sharon Fabian 1 The Roman Empire, at its height, stretched across much of Europe, but until then there were other groups of people who were not part of the Roman Empire living in Europe either. Many of these groups, called tribes, lived in the far north. Others lived in different parts of Europe not occupied by the Roman Empire. 2 Berber tribes, as many of them were known, did not like the idea of stability and agriculture. They preferred a roving and deviant lifestyle due to climate change and other factors, many tribes began to migrate closer to the Roman Empire, sometimes even settling within the boundaries of the Empire. This eventually led to conflicts between tribes and Romans. 3 The Romans used to win their clashes with various tribes, but this did not happen every time. In the late 300s, one tribe, the Western Goth, was threatened by another tribe, the Huns. The Huns pushed the Western Goths into Roman territory. This brought the Western Goths into more conflicts with the Romans. Eventually, it led to a big battle in Adrianopol. This battle, in 376 AD, showed that the invaders had the power to defeat the Roman soldiers. 4 In 395 AD, the Troops, led by Alaric I, invaded Italy and Greece. By 410, they attacked the city of Rome itself. There they killed Roman citizens, put waste on buildings, and robbed the city. By 412, they had attacked Spain and parts of present-day France, too. He wrote: The retreat of Rome was the natural and inevitable effect of an unworn greatness..... The story of its ruin (fall) is simple and clear. Instead of inquiring why the Roman Empire was destroyed, we should be surprised rather than that it has lasted for a long time. - Gibbon, the history of regression and From the Roman Empire the fall of Rome is an example of the domino effect. The domino effect comes from the idea of placing dominoes on its sides, one by one, and then deliberately knocking the first one in a line over into the adjacent dominoes. This creates a chain reaction and all dominoes fall down, one by one. For the fall of Rome, the Huns were an invasion from the east that caused the domino effect, an invasion (pushed to) goths, which then conquered (pushed to) the Roman Empire. The fall of the Western Roman Empire is a great lesson in cause and effect. The cause leads to an effect. In the following examples of cause and effect, you can say the word because before you read the reason, and then finish the sentence with the effect. Like this: Because roman legions evacuated Britannia in 410 AD, the Anglo-Saxons moved to Britannia. You can also say a word like this between cause and effect, like this: the Huns pushed other groups westward, so the saboteurs conquered Spain, North Africa, and removed Rome. Roman legions evacuate Britannia in 406 A.D. (reason) Anglo-Saxons moving to Britannia (influence) the Huns pushed other groups westward, eventually to Roman lands. (Cause) Aleric and Siggoths dismiss Rome, 410 AD (influence) vandals invade Spain, North Africa, rome is expelled in 455 AD (influence) here is a short list of the internal causes of the fall of Rome (reasons from within the Roman Empire): Christianity was less tolerant of other cultures and religions. Example: Emperor Theodosius ended the OlympicGames because they honored Zeus. Divide the empire into two weaker empires. Roman soldiers were loyal to their military commanders, not necessarily the emperor failed high tax economy the Romans became lazy and comfortable the Romans hired barbarian mercenaries to guard the border stake of the city of Rome and the Western Empire did not put an end to the entire Roman Empire. The Eastern Empire survived for another 1,000 years, sometimes called the Eastern Empire, the Byzantine Empire, after the capital Byzantium. Greek was the main language of the Byzantine Empire, not Latin. Watch this video clip of singer/songwriter and artist Jeffrey Lewis as he performs the fall of Rome. Going back to history for the children of the Roman Empire was a money when Valence became emperor, much had been wasted by the former emperors. There is nothing left to pay the salaries of Roman soldiers or even construction crews. Roman roads were not repaired and the road network soon collapsed. Without the road network, food and supplies as well as soldiers cannot travel quickly through the Empire. The barbarians had begun to take over parts of the Roman Empire. To the Romans, anyone who was not a citizen of Rome or did not speak Latin was berber. In Europe there were five great Berber tribes - the Huns, Franks, Vandals, Saxons, and Vithos (Goths) - all of whom hate Rome. Both berber tribes wanted to destroy Rome and the barbarians were destroying Roman towns and cities in the outer areas of the empire. The only reason they haven't destroyed Rome yet is because they spent time fighting each other as they did in Rome. Emperor Valence had a wonderful idea, he was with one of the Berber tribes against others. He promised the Gothlands, slaves and other payments if they would attack other barbarians and maintain order along the Danube. This has probably worked and has worked in other parts of the Roman Empire. But there was a big problem with this idea. Rome was bankrupt and there was no money to pay the Western Goths to support them as Rome promised. The Western Goths felt betrayed by the Romans and rebelled. Although Valence was no longer emperor when Rome fell, his actions contributed to the fall of the Roman Empire. Most scholars consider that the Western Roman Empire ended in 476 A.D. when the Western Roman Empire fell, it was not the end of the Eastern Roman Empire (renamed the Byzantine Empire). The Byzantine Empire lasted for another thousand years. After years of fighting against another King of Rome, Tarquin is proud, and the people of Rome won! The proud Tarkin wasn't a good king. I don't know the people were finally free to form a new government. It was very important for the ancient Romans to have this new government fair, and that all laws apply equally to all citizens of Rome, whether rich or poor. They called their new government SPQR. SPQR messages stood for Senatus Pulosy ke Romanusa - the Senate and the people of Rome. It was a new form of government, a republic. The Republic is a kind of government where people elect officials to represent them in government. The ancient Roman Republic only allowed Roman citizens to vote for the leaders, who created their laws. In ancient Rome, only free adult men can be citizens. This means that women, children and slaves are not citizens and cannot vote. However, it was a great improvement on the tyranny these ancient people had experienced under some of their kings. Rome is now ruled by officials called senators. Many of the laws that were put in place under the new government by senators were not new laws. But the laws were clearly written and applied to all citizens equally. Some new laws have been added. One new law is that you were innocent until proven guilty of any crime and another law stipulates that every citizen has the right to challenge his accusers in court. The law gave judges the power to overturn unfair laws. The new Roman Republic wanted to make sure that every citizen knew the laws. So they engraved the laws on metal plates and put them in the forum in Rome for everyone to read. These laws were called the Twelve Tables because there were twelve different sections. These laws related to crime, property and family matters such as marriage and inheritance. Laws, like all laws, have been amended over time to reflect the times. But the main laws, however, were presented in the Forum throughout the time Rome was a republic. In the latter part of the Roman Republic, before Rome became an empire, one of the reasons why some leaders in Rome resented Julius Caesar was because Caesar simply ignored the law. He didn't try to buy his way or flop his way or lie his way out of trouble. That's why the leaders in Rome were shocked by his behavior, and that's why they decided to assassinate him. They didn't want their laws to become meaningless. They certainly don't want a leader who thinks he's above the law. Rome was very proud of its laws, and proud that the laws applied equally to all Roman citizens, whether they were richer, poorer or stronger than all the people of Rome. The law is the law the ancient Romans were willing to submit to the rule of law much more than the Greeks who were displaced. This discipline and adherence to Roman law produced wonderful soldiers, which helped Rome expand and eventually become great. Many laws today are based in part on the laws of Roman law. Many of their laws don't fit our society today, but then some of their laws don't fit society as Rome grew. The laws under the Republic had been amended to suit the changing social climate of the population. The following are some of the laws in the 12 tables. These laws have been rewritten in modern English and simplified, but their meaning has not changed. These laws tell us about life in ancient Rome under the Republic. Here are some laws of twelve tables if you are invited to go to court, you should go. If you do not show up, you can be taken to court by force. If you need a witness to testify and did not show up, you can go once every three days and scream in front of his house. If the court says you owe money, you have 30 days to pay. After that, the person you owe money can grab you and bring you to court. If you still don't pay, and no one in court that day will pay you, you can be bound in chains that weigh at least 15 pounds or more. You wear those chains until you pay on the third day, people you owe money can decide to accept less than you owe them. If you pay, the status is settled and your strings are removed. When a man's land is located next to the highway, he must be left with two and a half feet of space between the adjacent buildings, he can attach it in any way he chooses, but if he neglects to do so, anyone else can drive an animal over the ground wherever he wants. A tree in a neighbor's farm should be bent twisted by wind and lean on your farm, legal action may be taken to remove that tree. If it's your tree, it's your fruit, even if it falls on another man's land. If the robbery took place at night, if the owner killed the thief, the thief is legally considered to have been killed. It is illegal to kill a thief by day unless he defends himself with a weapon. Even if he is armed, unless he uses a weapon and fights, you can't kill him. Even if he resists, first the call (so that someone may hear and exit.) a person who has been found guilty of giving a false witness must be thrown from tarbian rock and no one may hold meetings at night in the city. Putting any unconvicted man to death is forbidden. (One exception - a thief at night on your property.) A dead man should not be buried or burned inside the city (marriages) should not take place between the Libyans and aristocrats. (This law was changed over time.
